Benefits of Process Audits with DQS

These audits are designed based on input from the client. We provide assistance during the planning stages using our global network of industry experts and best practices. Typical benefits include:

- Global resources for performing process audits
- Large selection of SMEs (Subject Matter Experts) in a number of standard industry sectors and product standards
- Audits by a recognized industry leader in management systems

DQS Inc. is your go-to partner for non-certification Supplier and Process Audits.

Clients opt for these audits when they have a specific need or area where they want a deeper audit, or if they want to enhance their performance without the pressure of a certification. These services are customized to meet the needs of each customer, and DQS has a rich background in supporting our clients with Supplier and Process Audits, including several large accounts. Clients use our expertise and global footprint to satisfy their need for relevant information quickly and in a cost-effective manner.

Supplier Audits

Supply chain management is critical to helping organizations produce defect-free products and services, which are delivered by contract requirements. Since companies depend on their suppliers to contribute to the success of their businesses, supplier audits are a great way to have transparency and lead to the improvement of the products and services. By having a set system to track and monitor your suppliers' conformance, your company can mitigate the risk involved. A typical supplier audit can include benefits such as problem investigation, measurable data, process improvements and even cost reductions.

Process Audits

When there is a breakdown in process, a company can suffer great losses, but it may be difficult for an insider to pinpoint where the breakdown is occurring. Process audits are utilized to find that breakdown so it can be fixed. With a process audit, the auditors can focus on a specific area or problem, if need be. It allows customers to isolate the areas they believe need improvement instead of the areas that are functioning well.

How it works?

Simply provide us with the specific audit objectives and methodology, and we'll put our team to work. If you choose, you can instead tap into our expertise, and together we'll develop the best course of action. Our goal is to provide detailed, objective feedback whereby our client can assess how they can make improvements. Whether it's a short-term project or ongoing audits, non-certification audits from DQS provide value and reduce costs. Operational excellence is derived from enhanced knowledge of processes and supplier management. Allow us to be part of the solution.
